Rajalingam Raja

Director of Immunogenetics & Transplantation Laboratory
University of California & San Francisco
SAN FRANCISCO, USA

Dr. Rajalingam Raja currently serves as the Laboratory Director, Clinical Consultant, and Technical Supervisor for the Immunogenetics and Transplantation Laboratory at the University of California San Francisco (UCSF). He earned his Ph.D. under the mentorship of Prof. N.K. Mehra at the All India Institute of Medical Sciences in New Delhi. Dr. Raja's academic background includes six years of pre-doctoral studies focusing on HLA diversity, followed by six years of post-doctoral research in NK cell immunogenetics at Stanford. His extensive experience spans 21 years in clinical histocompatibility laboratory directorship within high-volume transplant centers at UCLA and UCSF, shaping him into a highly skilled investigator dedicated to the fields of histocompatibility, immunogenetics, and transplant immunology.
